Christmas is a wonderful time of year. All of the giving, baking, shopping and time with family makes it the best.

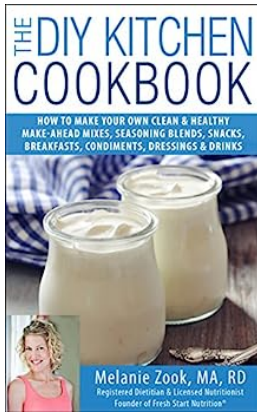

One of my favorite ways to assure that I can be with family as much as possible during this busy time of the year is by making cookies and candies throughout the month of December that I can bake ahead, freeze and take out of the freezer for family and guests to enjoy as I need. Another great way to have lots of Christmas cookies is to attend cookie exchanges where you get several different kinds of cookies to take home. At a cookie exchange, each person brings 100 or so of her specific Christmas cookie or Christmas candy and shares 10 or so with each person. So, you leave the Christmas cookie exchange with 100 different cookies. It's a brilliant way to have a great assortment of treats.

You'll be well prepared for baking Christmas cookies, or heading to the local cookie exchange when you see all of these delicious tried & true recipes.

I hope you're able to take some time this holiday season to be with your loved ones, too.

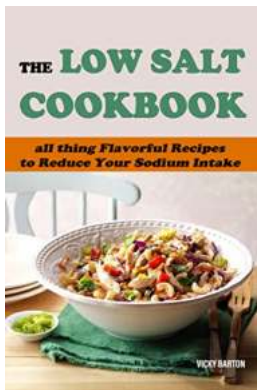

Enjoy,
